College Classes Planned by Council

A series of two classes in collage making will be held Feb. 18 and Feb. 25 at the Senior Citizen Center in Hornell.

The classes from 7 to 9 p.m. will be taught by Kathy Pilling Lewis and sponsored by the Hornell Area Arts Council.

Collage making is an art form that creates design using a variety of materials and colors as well as a collection of images, Mrs. Lewis explained.

The first class session will be devoted to collecting materials and cutting components and will show how to illustrate an idea by using pre-printed images and then rearranging or highlighting these images with line, color and shape.

The second session will be the arranging, assembling, and presentation of the collage with emphasis on arranging the composition, as well as instruction in types of backboards and other materials to complete the collage.

There will be a $10 fee for the two classes and materials. Participants are asked to bring their own scissors. Pre-registration is requested by Feb. 16 and can be made by calling the Arts Council office at 607-384-3822.

Education for Children

Name ARC Leader To Special Group

Annemarie Neubecker, director of the children's services program for the Livingston-Wyoming Association for Retarded Citizens, has been appointed to serve on a statewide committee set up to study issues of education of handicapped pre-schoolers.

She is one of three representatives from the western region of New York, the others from Erie and Wayne counties.

The committee was organized in response to a new law. This law basically extends to pre-school children with handicaps the same rights to a free and appropriate education that another mandates for school age children. The input from the committee will help to determine the direction of pre-school education for the handicapped in New York.

The children's services program, an early intervention pre-school program for children up to five years of age with handicapping conditions.

The school, which is operated by the Association for Retarded Citizens of Livingston and Wyoming counties offers education and therapy to approximately 100 children at its locations in Genesee and Warsaw. These services are offered free of charge to the child and family, with funding coming from state and county sources. The children enrolled are diagnosed as having a variety of disabling conditions, including mental retardation, physical difficulties and/or speech/language disorders.

The ARC program is the sole provider of pre-school education for the handicapped in the two-county area.

While the exact model for provision of service under the new law has not yet been decided, some factors are known. In New York, the State Health Department will be responsible for overseeing the regulating services to handicapped infants up to two years of age, while the State Education Department will have jurisdiction for services to three to five year olds. The ARC is uncertain as to what impact the new law will have on programming which already exists.
